The last year saw a dramatic increase in the demand for RedR's Bespoke Training and Consultancy Service. We have been working with a wealth of agencies from across the sector, who understand that running bespoke training in-house or in the field allows greater tailoring of content, flexibility and cost efficiency.

We have an unrivalled track record of delivering high quality training programmes, which are highly participatory, interactive and deliver real results on the ground.

Training on a full range of areas common to the humanitarian sector

RedR delivers a wide range of quality training programmes for the humanitarian sector, from introductory courses to technical and credit-rated specialist courses. These courses or individual modules can be tailored to meet your exact training needs. These include:

- People management
- Project management
- Security management
- Personal security
- Security consultancies
- Crisis management team simulations
- 1-1 country specific security briefings
- Staff safety
- Needs assessment
- Logistics
- Training of trainers

We can also devise an entirely new training solution, whatever your learning objectives, budget and time scale.

"RedR has provided a series of Managing People in Emergencies training courses for MSF Holland over the past year. This training is so important because all MSF work is team work - and the people management modules provide the necessary knowledge and skills to coordinate staff in order for them to successfully manage and inspire their teams in emergency situations."

Wouter van Empelen, Senior Trainer Advisor,
MSF Holland

Below are a few additional examples of how we can work with you to improve effectiveness and build capacity in the field.

Open enrolment training - making training even more affordable

We understand that training resources can be scarce, especially for smaller organisations. In response to this, we can run open enrolment courses that enable aid workers from a variety of organisations to attend a course. If you and other agencies have the same training requirements, then we can work with you to devise a training solution to meet your agreed needs, and you will all benefit from the shared costs.

Training with academic recognition - going beyond the training room

As part of our general training programme we have been responding to the increased professionalisation of the sector through our competency-based training. We can now offer these set training programmes in-house or in the field. These courses are credit-rated through Oxford Brookes University where credits earned can contribute to a post-graduate qualification. Courses available are: Certificate in Security Management, Essentials of Humanitarian Practice and Managing People and Projects in Emergencies.

Promoting better coordination of humanitarian programmes - the Cluster approach

RedR as a whole has been involved with a number of different Clusters and initiatives for some time. The expertise we have acquired from this enables us to provide training and consultation on how to deliver effective humanitarian coordination across a range of subject areas.

Please contact us for further information on any of these areas, or to find out more about all our services which can benefit you and your organisation.
